We are authorized to state that Worthy Master Robic of the State Grange, has made arrangements with the National Grange, so that the National Lecturer, nature as well as ourselves, and therefore Hon Mortimer Whitehead, of New Jersey, will be present at the opening of the State Grange, at Augusta, on the 21st day of individual. December, and will deliver an address. He is a very eloquent and popular lecturer, and we hope atrangements will be made for a general attendance by the Patrons of our State. The exact time will for when be hereafter announced.

No better time in the whole year for trimming fruit trees than this month. More attention should be paid to the en shipping of poultry to distant markets.

Says a New York sheep breeder: "It is no wonder that mutton is not as popular here as in England. The trouble is not in the breed. We have all the English breeds of sheep here, and the merine ir addition. And, so far as my experience goes, a little merino blood improves the quality of the mutton and gives a hardier and heather sheep, better adapted to our climate and; system of farming. We do not feed well chough. It would pay us handsomely to feed our sheep more or less grain, bran and cotton-seed cake." Many an ardent and zealous young reformer offends the very world he is burning to reform when he refuses to meet it with some slight compliance; as Felix Holt, in George Eliot's story, was willing to die for the improvement of society, but could by no means consent to wear a cra- MA NECENTRAL R. Manners come neva to morals, not alone because they help to make the world pleasanter, and thus render life easier to all around Ls, but also because they afford a key to those greater successes and usefulnesses for which all generous persons long. And their domain goes beyond this world, for, if the utir ost saint makes himself personally repulsive, he so far diminishes our desire to meet him in any land of pure delights. A correspondent of the Indiana Farmer has great faith in corn-cobs as a health promoter when fed to sigs. He gives several it stances where they have apparently proved efficacious. We quote from him: In October last, I had a lot of June pigs which began to show symptoms of disease, and a careful examination showed that they were being caten up by worms. learried out about ten bushels of cons, set them on fire, kept them all burning equally until they were done blazing, and then took one-half gallon of salt, seattered it over the coals regularly, then tobk one hushel shelled corn (any kind is good) and threw that on. Before the grain had time to burn up, I drowned all out with water, and, as the pigs were all around me, I had hard work to keep them from burning themselves, so eager were they to get at it. These pigs, thirty-one head, ate the entire lot and a considerable quantity of dirt or earth on which it was burned. The next day their discharges were black and full of stringy phlegm, pleces of pin-worms, etc. The pigs regained their ap-petites, the hair (which looked dead ard staring) became smooth and glossy, and all have been in fine fix ever since.

1. Charcoal is one of the very best absorbents of foul gases that we have. 2. Burned cobs are hard and sharp, and the salt and water makes them much harder, so that when eaten by the pigs, and passing through the intestines, they cut the worms in pieces, thus destroying them, so that they soon pass off. 3. The foul, sickening steach where our pige were before is now gone, and instead, all are lively, playing pigs, fat and slick. I should like others, who have unbealthy hoge, to try this simple, inexpensive treatment, prepared as above. It will surprise any man to see how eager they will be to get it; one bushel of cobs before burning is enough for four pige.

Why Some People are Poort. The Detroit Tribune says the reason is because sliver spoons are used to scrape kettles; coffee, tea, and spees are left to stand open and lose their strength; potatoes in the cellar grow, and the sprouts are not removed until the potatoes become worthless; brooms are never hung up; and are very soon spolled, nice-handled knives are hrown into hot water, the flour is who prides herself on her good cooking, sifted in a wasteful manner, and the bread pan is left with the dough sticking to it; rags, strings and papers, are thrown into able things that are placed upon the table, the fire; bits of meat, regetab es, bread and dilatory in connecting with the family cold puddings are thrown away, when they might be warmed, steam id and served from the dining-room, during the most as good, as new. The mixtress of the important daily events of household economy, is like absolute persecution to her first cold snap in the fall; ther comes cold, who takes such a delight in presenting a cough and coffin, with doctor's bills well-filled table to all the members of a thrown in. A mistaken idea; coonomy often costs more than it saves.

Corn Statistics.
